Amendments to a draft act

In amendments by Parliament, amendments to draft acts are highlighted in bold italics. Highlighting in normal italics is an indication for the relevant departments showing parts of the draft act which may require correction when the final text is prepared – for instance, obvious errors or omissions in a language version. Suggested corrections of this kind are subject to the agreement of the departments concerned.

The heading for any amendment to an existing act that the draft act seeks to amend includes a third line identifying the existing act and a fourth line identifying the provision in that act that Parliament wishes to amend. Passages in an existing act that Parliament wishes to amend, but that the draft act has left unchanged, are highlighted in bold. Amendment 1

Proposal for a directive Recital 1 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(1a) The European Union has set itself the objective of maintaining and developing an area of freedom, security and justice. According to the conclusions of the European Council in Tampere of 15 and 16 October 1999, and in particular point 33 thereof, the principle of mutual recognition should become the cornerstone of judicial cooperation in both civil and criminal matters within the Union, since enhanced mutual recognition of judicial decisions and judgements and the necessary approximation of legislation would facilitate cooperation between authorities and the judicial protection of individual rights.

Justification

This recital has been added in order to ensure consistency with the previous measures of the Roadmap on procedural rights, namely the Directive on the right to translation and interpretation in criminal proceedings and the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings.

Amendment 2

Proposal for a directive Recital 2 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(2a) The Implementation of the principle of mutual recognition of decisions in criminal matters presupposes that Member States have trust in each other's criminal justice systems. The extent of the mutual recognition exercise is very much dependent on a number of parameters, which include mechanisms for safeguarding the rights of suspected or accused persons and common minimum standards necessary to facilitate the application of the principle of mutual recognition.

Justification

This recital has been added in order to ensure consistency with the previous measures of the Roadmap on procedural rights, namely the Directive on the right to translation and interpretation in criminal proceedings and the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings.

Amendment 3

Proposal for a directive
Recital 4 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(4a) Strengthening mutual trust requires detailed rules on the protection of the procedural rights and guarantees stemming from the Charter and the ECHR. It also requires by means of this Directive and other measures, further development within the Union of the minimum standards set out in the ECHR and the Charter. In the implementation of this Directive, Member States should not in any event fall below the standards set out in the Convention and the Charter as developed by the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights.

Justification

This recital has been added in order to ensure consistency with the previous measures of the Roadmap on procedural rights, namely the Directive on the right to translation and interpretation in criminal proceedings and the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings.

Amendment 4

Proposal for a directive Recital 4 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(4b) Article 82(2) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union provides for the establishment of minimum rules applicable in the Member States to facilitate mutual recognition of judgments and judicial decisions and police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters having a cross-border dimension. Point (b) of Article 82(2) refers to "the rights of individuals in criminal procedure" as one of the areas in which minimum rules may be established.

Justification

This recital has been added in order to ensure consistency with the previous measures of the Roadmap on procedural rights, namely the Directive on the right to translation and interpretation in criminal proceedings and the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings.

Amendment 5

Proposal for a directive Recital 4 c (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(4c) Common minimum rules notably linked to fundamental rights and procedural rights in criminal proceedings should lead to increased confidence in the criminal justice systems of all Member States, which in turn should lead to more efficient judicial cooperation in a climate of mutual trust. Such common minimum rules should apply to access to a lawyer in criminal proceedings.

Amendment 6

Proposal for a directive

Recital 5

Text proposed by the Commission

(5) On 30 November 2009, the Council adopted the Roadmap for strengthening the procedural rights of suspected and accused persons in criminal proceedings ('the Roadmap'). In the Stockholm Programme, adopted on 11 December 2009³³, the European Council welcomed the Roadmap and made it part of the Stockholm Programme (point 2.4.). Taking a step-by-step approach, the Roadmap calls for the adoption of measures regarding the right to translation and interpretation the right to information on rights and information about the charges, the right to legal advice and legal aid, the right to communication with relatives, employers and consular authorities, and special safeguards for suspected or accused persons who are vulnerable. The Roadmap emphasises that the order of the rights is indicative, implying that it may be changed according to priorities. It is designed to operate as a whole; only when all its components are implemented will its benefits be felt in full;

(5) On 30 November 2009, the Council adopted the Roadmap for strengthening the procedural rights of suspected and accused persons in criminal proceedings ('the Roadmap'). In the Stockholm Programme, adopted on 11 December 2009, the European Council welcomed the Roadmap and made it part of the Stockholm Programme (point 2.4.). The European Council underlined the non-exhaustive character of the Roadmap, by inviting the Commission to examine further aspects of minimum procedural rights for suspected and accused persons, and to assess whether other issues, for instance the presumption of innocence, need to be addressed, in order to promote better cooperation in this area. Taking a step-by-step approach, the Roadmap calls for the adoption of measures regarding the right to translation and interpretation the right to information on rights and information about the charges, the right to legal advice and legal aid, the right to communication with relatives, employers and consular authorities, and special safeguards for suspected or accused persons who are vulnerable. The Roadmap emphasises that the order of the rights is indicative, implying that it may be changed according to priorities. It is designed to operate as a whole; only when all its components are implemented will its benefits be felt in full;

Justification

The non-exhaustive nature of the Roadmap is a relevant factor which should be stressed.

Amendment 7

Proposal for a directive

Recital 5 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(5a) Two measures included in the Roadmap have been adopted so far: the Directive 2010/64/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 October 2010 on the right to interpretation and to translation in criminal proceedings¹ and Directive 2012/.../EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of ... on the right to information in criminal proceedings².

Justification

The recital has been added in order to stress out the achievements accomplished so far, namely the adoption of the first two measures of the Roadmap on procedural rights.

Amendment 8

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6) This Directive sets out minimum rules on the right of access to a lawyer and the right to communicate upon arrest with a third party in criminal proceedings, excluding administrative proceedings leading to sanctions such as competition or tax proceedings, and in proceedings for the execution of an European Arrest Warrant. In doing so, it promotes the application of the Charter, in particular Articles 4, 6, 7, 47 and 48, by building upon Articles 3, 5, 6 and 8 of the ECHR as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights;

(6) This Directive sets out minimum rules on the right of access to a lawyer and the right to communicate upon arrest with a third party in criminal proceedings and in proceedings for the execution of an European Arrest Warrant. In doing so, it promotes the application of the Charter, in particular Articles 4, 6, 7, 47 and 48, by building upon Articles 3, 5, 6 and 8 of the ECHR as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.

Justification

No exclusions should be made. The recital has been amended in order to be consistent with the Objective of the Directive, as defined in Article 1 which states that the Directive lays down rules concerning the right of suspects and accused persons in criminal proceedings.

Amendment 9

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6a new

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6a) The term ‘lawyer’ should be regarded as including any person who is qualified under the national law of the Member State concerned to provide legal advice and assistance to suspects and accused persons.

Amendment 10

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6a) In the advancement of mutual trust of Member States in terms of criminal justice we must ensure that not only the rights of the suspect or accused person are guaranteed, but also the rights of the victims. Mutual recognition of minimum standards across the EU will not only benefit the principle of a common area of openness and security, but will also increase the confidence of citizens in their national judicial systems.

Or. en

Amendment 11

Proposal for a directive

Recital 7 a new

(7a) This Directive should be implemented taking into account the relevant provisions of the Directive 2012/.../EU [on the right to information in criminal proceedings] that provide that any person who is suspected or accused of having committed a criminal offence is provided promptly with information concerning the right of access to a lawyer and that a person who is arrested or detained is provided promptly with a written "letter of rights", which shall contain information about the right of access to a lawyer. In accordance with the provisions of the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings, the competent authorities should inform suspects or accused persons promptly of the right of access to a lawyer, as it applies under national law, which is essential to safeguarding the fairness of the proceedings, either orally or in writing. When providing suspects or accused persons with information in accordance with the Directive on the right to information in criminal procedure, competent authorities should pay particular attention to persons who cannot understand the content or meaning of the information, for example because of their youth or their mental or physical condition.

Amendment 12

Proposal for a directive Recital 7 b (new)

(7b) Member States should ensure that suspects and accused persons have the right of access to a lawyer, promptly, before the person is questioned by the law enforcement or judicial authorities, as from when the person is formally charged of having committed a criminal offence, as from the outset of deprivation of liberty, including detention and during any hearing. In any case, suspects and accused persons should be granted access to a lawyer during criminal proceedings before a court, if they wish to be assisted by a lawyer.

Justification

The recital aims to clarify the scope of the Directive.

Amendment 13

Proposal for a directive
Recital 8a new

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8a) Preliminary questioning by the police or other law enforcement authorities, immediately after the commission of a criminal act, whose sole purpose is the identification of the person concerned or the verification of the possession of weapons or other similar safety issues should not be covered by this Directive. The Directive does not cover either the situation when the police or other law enforcement authority have not yet identified any suspect or accused person such as when they carry out regular random checks / controls.

Amendment 14

Proposal for a directive
Recital 8 a (new)

(8a) In some Member States an authority other than a court having jurisdiction in criminal matters has competence for imposing sanctions in relation to relatively minor offences. That may be the case, for example, in relation to traffic offences which are committed on a large scale and which might be established following a traffic control. In such situations, it would be unreasonable to require that the competent authority ensure all the rights under this Directive. Where the law of a Member State provides for the imposition of a sanction regarding minor offences by such an authority and there is a right of appeal or the possibility for the case to be otherwise referred to a court having jurisdiction in criminal matters, this Directive should therefore apply only to the proceedings before that court following such an appeal or referral.

Justification

This amendment aims to align the recital to the amendment tabled to Article 2 paragraph 3.

Amendment 15

Proposal for a directive
Recital 9

(9) A similar right to the presence of a lawyer should be granted every time that national law expressly allows or demands the presence of the suspected or accused person at a procedural step or evidence gathering such as a search; in these cases, in fact, the presence of the lawyer can strengthen the rights of the defence without affecting the need to preserve the confidentiality of certain investigative acts,

(9) A similar right to the presence of a lawyer should be granted every time that national law expressly allows or demands the presence of the suspected or accused person at a procedural step or evidence gathering such as a search; in these cases, in fact, the presence of the lawyer can strengthen the rights of the defence without affecting the need to preserve the confidentiality of certain investigative acts, since the presence of the person excludes the confidential nature of the acts in question; this right should be without prejudice to the need to secure evidence which by its very nature is liable to be altered, removed or destroyed if the competent authority was to wait until the arrival of a lawyer;

since the presence of the person excludes the confidential nature of the acts in question. Once appointed, the lawyer should be able to ask for the notification of the carrying out of such acts. This right should be without prejudice to the need to secure evidence which by its very nature is liable to be altered, removed or destroyed if the competent authority was to wait until the arrival of a lawyer.

Justification

This amendment aims to align the recital to the amendment tabled to Article 4 paragraph 3.

Proposal for a directive Recital 10 a new

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(10a) In order to ensure a fair trial, pre-trial detention and detention conditions should fully respect the standards set out by the EU Charter on fundamental rights, by the European Convention on Human Rights and by the case law of the European Court of Human Rights. As poor detention conditions may have a negative impact on the fair trial rights, the lawyer should have the right to examine the specific detention conditions in which the suspect or accused person is detained. In addition, the lawyer should also have the right to submit a request to the competent authority in order to ask the examination of the detention conditions.

Member States should take all the necessary and reasonable measures/efforts to facilitate the exercise of the right of access to a lawyer of the rights conferred by this Directive to upon the suspect or accused person. Justification

This amendment aims to align the recital to the amendment made to Article 12. It should be clear that the aim of this provision is to keep up the existing standards on legal aid and not to set new obligations in this respect. Amendment

(30) This Directive promotes the rights of the child and takes into account the Guidelines of the Council of Europe on child friendly justice, in particular its provisions on information and advice. The Directive ensures that children cannot waive their rights under this Directive when they lack the capacity to understand the consequences of the waiver. The legal representative of a suspected or accused child should be always notified promptly of his custody and be informed about the reasons for the custody. If providing such is against the best interests of the child;

information to the child's legal representative is contrary to the best interests of the child, another suitable adult, such as a guardian or a relative should be informed instead. In accordance with the provisions of national law, Member States may ensure that specified authorities with competence for the protection of children should also be informed that a child has been deprived of his or her liberty.

Or. en

Justification

It is in the best interest of the child for the specific authorities with competence for the protection of children to be informed about the deprivation of the liberty of the child. During the negotiation in the Council one of the delegations proposed to insert a provision relating to the information of a competent institution dealing with children protection and rights about child's custody. All delegations agreed that it could be put in the preamble and be a kind of guide but not an obligation for the Member States. It is because not in every Member States there exists such an institutions which deals (in accordance with their statutes) with these kind of cases. Therefore, it is suggested to replace the wording 'Member States should ensure...' with 'Member States may ensure...'

Article 1

Text proposed by the Commission

The Directive lays down rules concerning the right of suspects and accused persons in criminal proceedings and of persons subject to proceedings pursuant to Council Framework Decision 2002/584/JHA to have access to a lawyer and to communicate upon arrest with a third party.

Amendment

The Directive lays down rules concerning the rights of suspects and accused persons in criminal proceedings and of persons subject to proceedings pursuant to Council Framework Decision 2002/584/JHA of 13 June 2002 on the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between Member States ("European arrest warrant proceedings") to have access to a lawyer and to have a third party informed of the deprivation of liberty.

Justification

As this Directive refers to two rights, the word "right" should be used in plural. The last part of the article has been changed in order to be consistent with the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings.

(a) before the start of any questioning by the police or other law enforcement authorities;

(c) from the outset of deprivation of liberty.

(d) at any hearing;
(e) from the moment the person is summoned to appear before a court having jurisdiction in criminal matters, whichever the earliest

Justification

The suspect or accused person should be granted access to a lawyer in any case from the first questioning carried out by law enforcement or other competent authorities. Taking in consideration that in some Member States, the first questioning/questioning could be carried out by a judicial authority, this case should also be covered. The right to a lawyer should not be dependent on the state of deprivation of liberty, as any questioning may lead to self-incriminating statements and abuses and ill-treatment are possible even vis-a-vis people not deprived of their liberty. The presence of a lawyer is even more important during hearings.

Any limitations of the meetings and communication between the suspect or accused person and his/her lawyer are unnecessary and restrictive and would avert from an effective exercise of the right of access to a lawyer.

Member States shall ensure that persons to whom Article 2 refers, who are deprived of their liberty and who are non-nationals have the right to have consular or diplomatic authorities of their State of nationality informed promptly upon their deprivation of liberty about the deprivation of liberty, to communicate with the consular or diplomatic authorities and to be visited by the consular or diplomatic authorities in private. Justification

The right to inform consular authorities should not be open to derogation, as the corresponding right of States under the Vienna Convention is not subject to exceptions Besides life and physical integrity, liberty should be a reason for derogation as well. The amendment also aims to interlink the situations that should give rise to derogation, while at the same time stressing out that derogations should be based on a case by case assessment The last part of the amendment aims to allow authorities other than judicial, to derogate provided that their decision is subject to judicial review.

ANNEX

STATEMENT

‘Article 47 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union provides that legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources in so far as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Having regard to these provisions, considering the need for all the persons to have an effective access to justice and emphasizing the importance of ensuring equal access to justice for all the citizens,

The European Parliament calls on the Commission to come up with a proposal on legal aid at the earliest.’

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

The European Parliament has called for a stronger protection of the rights of the victims of crime from one side and of the suspect and accused person from the other side for a long time. After the failure of the adoption of the Framework Decision on certain procedural rights in criminal proceedings tabled by the European Commission in 2004, with the Pagano report adopted on 7 May 2007, the Plenary strongly called for an ambitious legal instrument on procedural safeguards in criminal proceedings.

The message by the European Parliament was followed up and, on the initiative of the Swedish Presidency, in November 2009 the Council adopted a Roadmap for strengthening procedural rights of suspected or accused persons in criminal proceedings which changes the initial approach of the European Commission, aiming at the adoption of a horizontal and comprehensive instrument, to a less ambitious but maybe more realistic step by step approach covering the following measures:

- A. Translation and interpretation;
- B. Information on rights and information about the charges;
- C. Legal advice and legal aid;
- D. Communication with relatives, employers and consular authorities;
- E. Special safeguards for suspected or accused persons who are vulnerable;
- F. Green paper on pre-trial detention;

The Roadmap has become an integral part of the Stockholm Programme. It clearly states that the list of measures is not exhaustive.

The measures included in the Roadmap have partly already been put in place. The Directive on the right to interpretation and translation in criminal proceedings has been adopted on 20 October 2010 and the Directive on the right to information in criminal matters is now finalised awaiting to be published in the Official Journal.

The proposal for a Directive on the right of access to a lawyer in criminal proceedings and on the right to communicate upon arrest was adopted by the European Commission on 12 July 2011 and is the third step in the implementation of the Roadmap. It brings together the part of measure C concerning the right to legal advice and measure D on the right to communication with relatives, employers and consular authorities.

The proposal lays down the main principle that every suspect or accused person should be given the right of access to a lawyer as soon as possible and in a manner that allows them to exercise their defence rights effectively. It also specifies that in any event these rights should be granted before the start of any questioning, upon carrying out any procedural or evidence gathering act and in case of deprivation of liberty. The proposal further identifies the content of the right, stresses that meetings between the suspect or accused person and the lawyer should be confidential, lists the derogations allowed to the general principles and provides for rules in case of waiver of the right to a lawyer.

From the point of view of the remedies, the proposal aims to ensure that effective remedies are granted and in particular that in case of breach of the right of access to a lawyer, the suspect or accused person is placed in the same position as if the breach had not occurred and notably that every statement made or evidence gathered in breach of the right to a lawyer may not be used unless this would not prejudice the rights of the defence.

The same principle applies to persons other than suspects and accused persons, in case they become accused or suspected while heard by the police or the law enforcement authority.

The proposal of the Commission does not set out specific rules on legal aid. It contains only a general reference to legal aid and a provision which states that Member States shall not apply less favourable provisions on legal aid than those currently in place in respect of access to a lawyer provided pursuant to this Directive.

Two provisions deal with the right to communicate upon arrest and the right to communicate with consular or diplomatic authorities.

POSITION OF THE RAPPORTEUR

Despite the existence of common principles and minimum standards stemming both from the ECHR and the EU Charter, provisions governing access to a lawyer vary significantly from one Member State to another.

Access to effective defence in criminal proceedings has a different extension in the Member States depending both on the specific legal system and its practical application and this has an indirect but significant implication on the EU policy of mutual trust and recognition.

The provisions of the European Convention on Human Rights and the case law of the European Court of Human Rights are not uniformly implemented and respected by the Member States which gives rise to diverging standards throughout the European Union.

The Parliament has called several times for the need of strengthening procedural rights of the suspect and accused persons, stressing out the need to strike the right balance between freedom, justice and security.

The need to enhance mutual trust became even more imperative with the implementation of the mutual recognition programme of judicial decision in criminal proceedings. Legislation adopted at EU level over the last few years has improved the effectiveness of prosecutions and enforcement of sentences across the EU, yet there is a consensus that the absence of measures at EU level to promote the rights of citizens as suspects or accused in criminal proceedings in another Member State has created a sense of imbalance in EU justice policies.

In my view such instruments should have been adopted before the implementation of the principle of mutual recognition and of the measures linked to it.

Citizens have to be confident that their rights are fully respected and their security is provided when they are travelling and that they have the same guarantees in all the Member States.

The scope of this Directive should be broad enough in order to avoid any abuses but at the same time to ensure that the effective and efficient administration of justice is not affected. The right of access to a lawyer for suspects and accused persons should be an overarching principle since the earliest stage of criminal proceedings.

The need for a suspect or accused person to have access to a lawyer and for that legal access to be effective is a key element in placing suspected or accused citizens in a position to defend themselves properly in front of the investigating authorities and at trial.

Without proper access to a lawyer, the effective exercise of other defence rights may remain illusory.

The Directive will be implemented in all the Member States irrespective of their legal systems ensuring the same standards all over Europe.

In the implementation of this Directive Member States should not in any event fall below the standards set out in the Convention and the Charter as developed by the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights.

My draft report builds on the following ideas:

- a certain level of consistency should be kept with the already adopted measures A and B, that is the reason why I proposed the amendment to Article 2.3.

- the right to a lawyer should be broad and should be granted at an early stage of the proceedings without entailing the carrying over of the investigation. As stressed within the amendments proposed on Article 3, it should be granted irrespective of the deprivation of liberty, in case the person is questioned by law enforcement or other competent authorities and, in any case from the moment the person is summoned to appear before a court having jurisdiction in criminal matters. In addition, the suspect or accused person should have the right to meet and to communicate with the lawyer (amendment to Article 4.1).

- as concerns the participation of the lawyer at any investigative or evidence gathering acts at which the person's presence is required or permitted as a right in accordance with national law, whenever the lawyer has been appointed, he should be able to ask for the notification of carrying out of such acts, which shall be recorded using the recording procedure in accordance with the law of the Member State. The absence of the lawyer should not however avert the competent authorities from carrying out such acts, once the notification has been correctly done.

- in the view of the effective exercise of the rights of defence of a suspect or accused person, there shouldn't be any limitation in the duration and the frequency of the meetings between him/her and his/her lawyer (amendment to Article 4.5) as well as to their confidentiality (amendment to Article 7). The same principle should apply to Article 8, while at the same time authorising a competent authority other than judicial to derogate from the right of access to a lawyer on condition that the decision is subject to judicial review. The right to inform consular authorities should not be open to derogations.

- with regard to the provisions referring to the waiver, the draft report aims to eliminate the prior legal advice on the consequences of the waiver, which might be excessive and could lead to delays in the proceedings.

- the duty to check the detention conditions should be exercised by the public authorities and not by the lawyer, as stressed with the amendment tabled on Article 4.4.

- for the sake of clarification, for the purposes of this Directive, a child should be considered as somebody less than 18 (amendment to Article 5). Mainstreaming the rights of vulnerable suspects and accused persons in this proposal is of utmost importance, therefore the rights applicable to children in accordance with the provisions of this Directive should be extended to this particular category of persons.

- in order to ensure consistency with the relevant provisions of the Directive on the right to information in criminal proceedings the right to communicate upon arrest has been replaced with the right to have a third party informed. Therefore the suspect or accused person who is deprived of liberty shall have the right to have at least one person, such as a relative or employer named by him informed of the deprivation of liberty.

- Taking in consideration that paragraph 2 of Article 12 which refers to legal aid might have an important impact on the legal systems of a number of Member States, it seems more appropriate to deal with this issue in the context of the future measure on legal aid.

In the absence of substantial rules on legal aid in this Directive it should in fact be avoided to set principles that could prejudice such substantial rules that would be the object of a future instrument. The Commission has stated that the issue of legal aid is extremely complex and current information is very patchy. Therefore, it would have required much more time to present the proposal if legal aid had been included, which would have not been appropriate, given the need for action on the substantive right.
