Background information:

According to Dutch Nationality Law (Rijkswet op het Nederlanderschap, artikel 8) naturalization can in general be granted after 5 years of legal residence in The Netherlands prior to the request. Momentarily an amendment is pending to prolong this term to 7 years. Parliament has requested the Minister for Migration to use the European Migration Network to make an inventory of the situation in other Member States.

The Netherlands applies shorter terms for the following categories:

- no term is applied for former Dutch nationals;
- a 3-year term for spouses and partners of nationals; by a national acknowledged paternity of minors; for adopted young-adults and for stateless persons;

The Netherlands is interested to see if this is also the case in other (Member) States.

Concerning the residence requirement of 5 or 10 years (short or long track), it is worth mentioning that the person concerned must have: an unlimited residence permit at the time of the application; and - the legal stay requested for the period preceding the application (5 or 10 years) must be uninterrupted (covered by residence permits valid for periods exceeding three months - "short stays" are not taken into account). b) Other requirements Both in the short track and in the long track procedure, the person needs to prove its knowledge of one of the three official languages (Dutch, French or German at the A2 level of the common European framework of reference for languages). The other requirements differ: - Long track: if a person wants to acquire the Belgian nationality after ten years of legal residence, he/she needs prove, by all legal means, his/her participation 'to the economic and/or socio-cultural life of the host community' (in addition to the two requirements mentioned above on residence and language). - Short track: if a person wants to acquire the Belgian nationality after five years of legal residence, he/she needs to show (in addition to the requirements mentioned above on residence and language) - evidence of his/her civil integration (a certificate of advanced secondary education, a vocational training of at least 400 hours or an integration course) and of economic participation (having worked 468 days in the 5 years preceding the application). 2. a. for refugees and their family members; No b. for minors; Yes. 	Switzerland	Yes	1. Regular naturalization: People who have been resident in Switzerland for twelve years – the years spent in this country between the completed 10th and 20th years are counted double for this purpose – may apply for naturalisation. Our State Secretariat examines whether applicants are integrated in the Swiss way of life, are familiar with Swiss customs and traditions, comply with the Swiss rule of law, and do not endanger Switzerland's internal or external security. In particular, this examination is based on cantonal and communal reports. If the requirements provided by federal law are satisfied, applicants are entitled to obtain a federal naturalisation permit from the State Secretariat for Migration. Naturalisation proceeds in three stages. Thus the federal naturalisation permit only constitutes the Confederation's "green light" for the acquisition of Swiss nationality. However, the cantons and communities have their own, additional residence requirements which applicants have to satisfy. Swiss citizenship is only acquired by those applicants who, after obtaining the federal naturalisation permit, have also been naturalised by their communities and cantons. As a rule, there is no legally protected right to being naturalised by a community and a canton. Facilitated naturalization: Foreign spouses of Swiss nationals who have lived in Switzerland for a year may apply for facilitated naturalisation after three years of marriage, provided they have lived in Switzerland for a total of five years. People who have close ties with Switzerland may apply for facilitated naturalisation even if they are resident abroad. In such cases, however, they must have been married to a Swiss spouse for at least six years. 2. 2.
